Youth Worker
Our Role	Youth work is the development of a relationship between a youth worker and a young person through: connecting with young people; where: young people are empowered, including the choice to engage for as long as agreed; and that: supports their holistic, positive development as taiohi that contribute to themselves, their whanau, community and world.
Confidentiality	Your ability to trust the youth worker to hold information in confidence is fundamental to the relationship. When confidences may need to be shared, the youth worker will explain the boundaries of confidentiality. These boundaries will consider the requirements of your situation/context and our professional practice Limits to confidentiality, which may lead to disclosure, apply when: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• The young person or someone else is in danger</li> <li>• There is an emergency situation</li> <li>• It is required by legislation or the courts</li> <li>• The young person is incapable of consenting.</li> </ul> When information is disclosed, the youth worker will endeavour to obtain your permission to seek the appropriate support. Where this is not possible youth workers will inform the young person of any disclosure. Where information is disclosed, only the minimum required for your support should be given. Youth workers will comply with the Privacy Act 1993, and in particular will ensure collection, storage, access, correction, use and disclosure of information is dealt with in accordance with this Act.
Working Collaboratively	Youth workers will respect and co-operate with other professionals and/or other significant people involved in the young person's life to secure the best possible outcomes for the young people they engage with and provide the best support possible.
